Domestic/Intimate Partner Violence: Finding Safety and Support

It Can Happen To Anyone – Remember, You Are Not Alone!
Each year, domestic/intimate partner violence affects millions of people in the United States, most often women. It can happen to anyone, regardless of gender, employment or education level, race or ethnic background, religion, marital/relationship status, physical ability, age or sexual orientation.

It Is Not Your Fault – No One Deserves To Be Battered.
If you are being abused by your partner, you may feel confused, afraid, angry and/or trapped. All of these emotions are normal responses to abuse.

Find Support – Help Is Available.
Developing a support network can be very helpful as you plan for safety. Support is available.
There are organizations that provide free and confidential help. Please see the community resources on the back of this flier.

What is domestic/intimate partner violence?
Domestic/intimate partner violence, or battering, is a pattern of abusive behaviors that some individuals use to control their intimate partners. Battering can include physical, sexual and emotional abuse, and other controlling behaviors. The following questions may help you decide whether you are being abused.

Does your partner ever:
• Hit, kick, shove or injure you?
• Use weapons/objects against you or threaten to?
• Force or coerce you to engage in unwanted sexual acts?
• Threaten to hurt you or others, have you deported, disclose your sexual orientation or other personal information?
• Control what you do and who you see in a way that interferes with your work, education or other personal activities?
• Constantly criticize you, call you names or put you down?
• Deny your basic needs, such as food, housing, clothing, or medical and physical assistance?

If you answered “yes” to any of the above, it may be time to think about your safety.
