Award for Distinguished Leadership

The Distinguished Leadership Award recognizes any person in the Emory community who has demonstrated outstanding leadership to and/or for women. The award honors any person whose leadership has helped to improve or elevate the status of women by:

- Improving or developing policies and procedures that address issues that affect women in the Emory community and beyond to create institutional transformation.
- Working to improve gender based education by leading programs that address the needs of women in the areas of: intellectual, physical, mental, spiritual, or financial well being.
- Demonstrating exceptional leadership in their field, career, or academic program.

The nomination materials should include specific demonstrable examples of how the nominee has contributed to one or more of the mentoring criteria listed above. Nominees may be students, staff, or faculty.
