Award for Public or Digital Scholarship

The Award for Public or Digital Scholarship honors an individual whose scholarship on feminist or gender-based issues has communicated and circulated important ideas to and beyond the Emory community. This award is open to any member of the Emory community whose public or digital scholarship has demonstrated commitment or concern around issues that affect women, girls, or gender equity. The award recognizes an individual whose public or digital scholarship have inspired, enriched, or contributed to public conversations about:

- Gender-based education.
- Activism or advocacy for gender equality.
- Issues of feminist importance.

The nomination should include a description of how the nominee’s public or digital scholarship has contributed to the areas listed above. It may also include references to digital work, if available.
